

Magical streets & cups of coffee

Bump into history at every corner and unwind with a freshly-brewed cuppa in the street-side cafes that dot the Croatian capital

FRANCESCA ROSS

On one side of the massive wall are buildings in pastel shades of blue, green, yellow and blue. On the other side are rows of cute, ornate historic street cafes. The aroma of fresh coffee blends pleasantly with the view of the city and sea.

It's a scene that's both beautiful and friendly. Welcome to the street. A perfect start to today in Zagreb.

Walk further on the main highway. Zagreb is the capital of Croatia and the country's largest city. While it's often portrayed as a city lost in time in favour of the country's more spectacular coast, those who make their way here will hopefully disagree.

The city is a unique blend of the old and new and is best experienced by taking long walks through the pedestrian-only squares. For a more relaxing view of the city, visit the city's number of cafes, while your coffee starts a chat over the city's splendid history.

There's always something new to see and do in Zagreb. In the main square, the city's centre is all areas together at the city's main square, the Trg bana Jelencina. All walks, museums and parks make today's Zagreb exciting. Many gathered here for the opening of the 2012 Euro Cup. In the foreground, you can see the main square of the famous St Mark's Church, while on either side of the square are buildings and cafes where the locals gather to sit on coffee and watch the world go by.

From here on, it depends on your mood. If you want a glass of local beer, just check behind the main square and head to the main square, which is one of the most vibrant spots you'll ever come across. The market is full of items prepared locally and is a good place to find the best local produce. Adding to the charm is the famous main square, which allows the view of the city from the main square.
